Hi Annie,

The engagement team has a good understanding of our situation. It is similar to others they have been seeing around the state.

Since we are the contract manager, we control who gets what data. This paired with the fact we do not have any LPR cameras pointed at our schools, is a good thing. Currently, we have MLPD on to access our networks of data through their sign-on credentials: Raven and the LPR Cameras.

We can toggle on or off either of these data sets with MLPD at any time. If we are concerned about the LPR data, we can turn that off, but leave the gunshot detection active since it is ears only. Or turn it all off for MLPD, and they would then have to coordinate with us to get that data.

Per our MOU, I believe we should circle back to MLPD and get a list of those who have our permission to pull the data, and to ensure they are putting their name into the system when they download data. This builds accountability on their end and oversight on ours.

Turning off the data does require an email to their engagement team, and they can make the switch ASAP. This is due to how their network is designed. Additionally, our service rep can also assist in getting data turned off.

If there is anything else I can do to help collect information or if you feel we need to make adjustments at this time, I am happy to get those in motion.

Best,

--
